Valiant heroes, on this Mayday morn we welcome you sincerely. All glory to you.

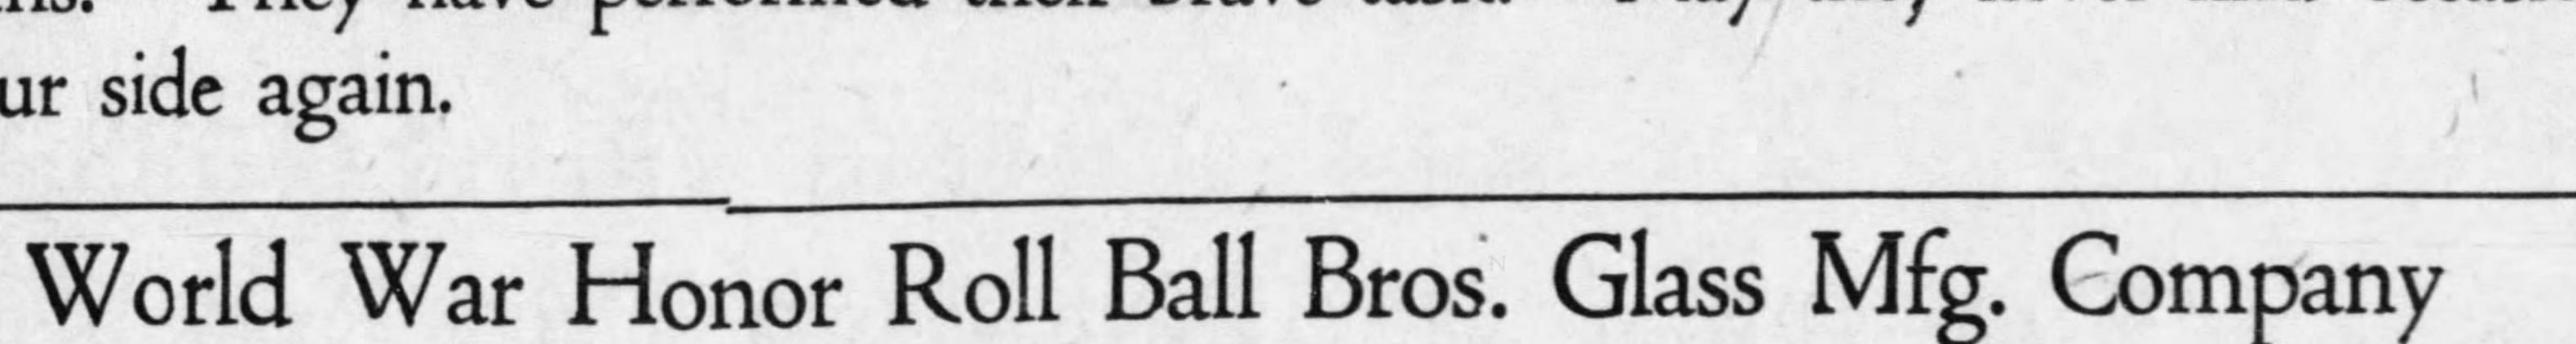

And to you, dear fathers and mothers we say, may your honored sons never leave you again.

It is a great pleasure on this Mayday Morn to welcome you home, you valiant heroes of the Marne, St Mihiel, Chateau-Thierry, Verdun and many other hard and strenuous battles. It is not only a pleasure, but a duty as well, and one from which we do not shirk but come forth with open arms to perform. Our wish is for you the best that life can give to any man, success on this earth and comfort hereafter.

And to you, sailors of the briny deep--you men, without whom the war would never have been won. To you we extend the same greetings. You combatted a vicious foe in the treacherous submarine, but not in vain. You subdued him, and as a result you men, America and the allies won for civilization her hardest fight. To you all credit is due and is cheerfully extended.

Now we come to the mournful task---that of saying a word for those who will never return. Words cannot express our sorrow, so we can only be consoled by the fact that they died while performing a duty for the benefit of the entire civilized world and as a result deserve and are extended the sorrowful and heartfelt congratulations of an entire world. To the parents of all these men we say you have raised manly and true Americans. They have performed their brave task. May they never find occasion to leave your side again.
