PARENTS AND TEACHERS IMPROVE SCHOOL SPIRIT

"Co-operation of teachers and parents in such an organization as a parent-teacher association makes possible the carrying out of many effective measures in education," said D. W. Horton, superintendent of city schools, speaking last night at a meeting of parents at the Stevenson school.

Superintendent Horton cited health and welfare programs for the benefit of children as especially effective when backed by the combined support of teachers and parents, and also praised parent-teacher associations as means of bettering school and community spirit.

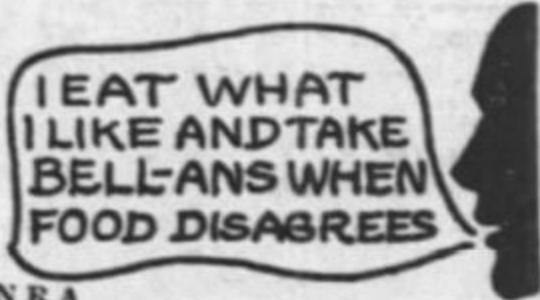

Pupils of the Stevenson school, of which J. S. Shepard, is principal, presented a program of entertainment at the meeting. Officers of the parent-teacher organization at the school are Mrs. August Haas, president; Mrs. Ruth Ben, vice-president, and Miss Ruth Jones, secretary-treasurer.
